June 1 Quarterly Meeting: author of new book on Anabaptist leader, Pilgram Marpeck, to speak

Mennonite seminary professor, William Klassen, co-author of the new book, Marpeck: A Life of Dissent and Conformity, will discuss the importance of the early Anabaptist leader, Pilgram Marpeck. This thorough biography (Herald Press, 2008) shows how Marpeck, perhaps more than any other early Anabaptist figure, helped lay the theoretical and practical foundations of the believers church.

In the book, Klassen examines the life and thought of urban minister,

Pilgram Marpeck

Pilgram Marpeck, who was employed by the city councils in Strasbourg and Augsburg as a civil engineer.

Marpeck appealed to the authorities to exercise tolerance toward Anabaptism, though he was fired for refusing to aid in capturing them. Father of one birth child and three adopted children, he lived to die a natural death in Augsburg in 1556.

An important Anabaptist leader and thinker of the South German Anabaptists from 1530 until his death,

Great Buys on Rare Books

Join us on Friday evening, April 24, at 6:30 pm, for good fellowship and great book buys at the Society's 204th auction of rare and used books. Normally held on second Fridays in March, June, September and December, this extra sale coincides with our annual family history conference. At these lively auctions, which attract a cross-section of Plain People and non-Mennonite book buyers, bargains abound on quality rare, used and out-of-print books.

In particular, the April sale includes some unique, one-of-a-kind items, such as six leather-bound copies of The Martyrs' Mirror. Three are in English (an 1837 edition published in Lampeter Square, Lancaster County, Pa., and two 1886 editions published in Elkhart, Indiana, by the Mennonite Publishing Company (lots #1, 73 and 350).

Three other Martyrs' Mirrors for sale are in German (a 1782 edition published in Pirmasens, Germany, which includes Oesch family records in French, and two 1814 editions published by Joseph Ehrenfried in Lancaster, one of which is inscribed, "This Book bought by William Frantz 1864 at the sale of Widdow Elizabeth Landis in Lampeter" (lots #128, 129 and 340).

The April 24 sale also includes rare hymnbooks. These include four

Society Seeking College Interns

Earn real wages and get job experience by working at the Society this summer. We are looking for student interns to work in several capacities: organizing our summer used book sale, helping customers in our book store and library, assisting in our museum, and helping to give tours. If possible, students should be enrolled at a Pennsylvania college or university and eligible for financial aid from their school for the Society to access the state funds available for us to hire them. Contact Beth at director@lmhs.org for more information.

WHAT'S GOING ON

Mennonite Writing Web Site

Goshen College (Indiana) English department has launched the on-line Center for Mennonite Writing. Professor Ann Hostetler hopes that this web forum will "open up the possibility of an international reach and scope for the study of Mennonite literature." The site features a journal section that includes new writing and criticism; a resources section that includes writers' biographies, bibliographies, links to other relevant sites and classic Mennonite texts; and an interactive forum. (Matthew Yoder, a 2008 communication major from Lancaster, Pa., designed the site.) The second volume of the Center for Mennonite Writing Journal, now live, is devoted to the poetry and memoirs of Yorifumi Yaguchi, distinguished Japanese poet and Mennonite lay minister. Join the conversation at www.mennonitewriting.org/.

"Sounds in the Land" Music Conference

Marpeck's writings were only recently rediscovered, thus drawing him out of obscurity.

Marpeck was concerned with three primary themes that recur in his writings: the connection between inner and outer spirituality; freedom of conscience with respect to legalism and coercion; and the primacy of love. Marpeck engaged in debate around these issues with many of his contemporaries, both within and outside of the Anabaptist movement.

Marpeck believed that legalism can stifle the Spirit of God, but that order is necessary to provide moral constraints on sinful behavior. He sought to develop a third way between legalism and license. In many ways, his struggle to remain faithful while engaged with society mirrors the contemporary situation of many Mennonites today.

Klassen is currently adjunct professor and principal emeritus at St. Paul's United College, University of Waterloo, Ontario. He has been professor of New Testament and Peace Studies at Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminary and the University of Manitoba, and he holds a PhD from Princeton Theological Seminary.

This free event takes place at Groffdale Mennonite Church, 168 N Groffdale Road, Leola, Pa. All are welcome.

May 23 Field Trip: Exploring Lancaster's Old Order Mennonites

On Saturday, May 23, join retired history teacher, Henry Benner, and two Old Order historians for a tour exploring Old Order Mennonites of Lancaster County.

Offering unique access, this tour will visit an Old Order meeting-house to understand its architecture and order of service.

It will stop at a farm to watch horse-shoeing and go inside to look at quilts. The tour will visit the Old Order produce auction, and stop at Shady Maple restaurant for a smorgasbord lunch.

En route the bus will tour farming country to observe older farming practices and to catch the spirit of an Old Order Mennonite worldview.

Cost of the tour is $60 for members and $70 for nonmembers, with a $5 discount for groups of five or more. For information and to register, contact Dorothy Siegrist at the Society, (717) 393-9745.

Your seats are reserved once registration and payment are received.

Society Plans Tour to Native American Sites in Lancaster

They are remembered by the names they left behind for the waterways they traversed – Conestoga, Susquehanna, Cocalico, Pequea. They were here perhaps a thousand years before Lancaster County's first European settlers arrived in 1710.

How did the local Native American Indians live at the time of white Mennonite settlement in Lancaster County nearly 300 years ago? Where were they located and what do we know of their history? The Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society is planning a unique field trip on Saturday, June 13, and on Saturday, September 26, to address these questions, entitled, Following the Footsteps of Native Americans in Lancaster.

Join us as we travel back through time aboard comfortable coach buses to visit Washington Boro, site of a fortified village of the Susquehannock Indians before they were conquered by the Iroquois in 1675. The Susquehannocks traveled the river that bears a derivation of their name, following its length to prime hunting and fishing grounds, in addition to cultivating maize, beans and squash in fields near their villages.

(Susquehannock appears to have been an Algonquin name meaning "people of the Muddy River.") Dr. Fred Kinsey, archaeologist who supervised the dig at Washington

Boro, is serving as a consultant to this tour.

We will also visit Conestoga Indian Town at Turkey Hill, where Susquehannock refugees resettled near the river on land granted to them out of the Penn family's manor just a few years before the first Swiss-German settlers arrived in 1710. There they became known as Conestoga Indians, from the location of their village, and made a living from farming, hunting, broom- and basket-making. Their numbers declined through out-migration as white settlement increased, before their final massacre.

The tour will stop at a local Indian pow-wow and return by way of the Conestoga Historical Society, noting their exhibit on ancient Indian petroglyphs. The tour will discuss the interactions between Native American and white settlers, covering related historic sites along the way. Lunch will be en route at a local inn.

The bus will leave the Historical Society at 8:30 am and return about 4:30 pm. Cost of the tour is $60 for members, $70 for non-members, including transportation, admissions

CONESTOGA INDIAN TOWN

About one mile eastwards stood the Conestoga Indian town. Its peaceful Iroquoian inhabitants were visited by William Penn in 1701 who made treaties with them. In 1763 they were ruthlessly massacred by a frontier mob called the "Paxton Boys".

DIRECTOR'S REFLECTIONS

Many of you know the experience of finishing a big project. In my case, that project was completing a PhD dissertation after many years of work. In so doing, I recognized my connection to a host of other people who helped make it happen: a respectful academic community as I tackled Amish and Mennonite subject matter; a board of directors here at the Society who provided me release time to write; my parents, who offered encouragement and childcare; a supportive church community, spouse, and long-suffering son.

Beth Graybill

As that project is complete and I turn back to the matter at hand – fundraising for our educational programming – I am struck by the necessity of inter-connection, our need for each other. You, as members and supporters of the Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society, participate in a much larger community that adds meaning to your life. And in a year of heightened economic pressures, we rely on your support more than ever.

This year we are telling stories of Mennonite interaction with local Conestoga Indians nearly 300 years ago through educational events and tours, as we prepare for events to mark the landmark, 300th anniversary of permanent white settlement in Lancaster next year (when our Swiss-German Mennonite ancestors arrived here).

While we raise two-thirds of our budget through memberships, fees for services and book sales, the remainder must come from supporters like you. We hope that you will respond generously to this year's Annual Fund campaign, "Rooted in History, Growing in Faith."

When times are tough, the simple things in life gain importance: a good book for good value about Pennsylvania German art and culture, an engaging talk about your heritage, tracing your Mennonite family tree, learning the history of people and places that deepen your roots in Pa. German and Mennonite family history.

While we can't change the economy, we can offer meaningful books, gifts, and educational programs that deepen our faith and provide beauty and security for the days ahead. The wellspring of identity growing out of our Pennsylvania German and Mennonite family history can anchor us and provide security amid larger forces of uncertainty.

Thank you for doing your part to help us secure our financial future during these tight economic times.

Reserve tickets now for May 9 Annual Banquet: Writing Amish Family Stories

Join us on Saturday, May 9, at 6 pm, for our annual meeting and banquet at Weaver's banquet hall in Adamstown, Pa., just north of Ephrata, to explore the theme, "How Research in Family History Can Shape Your Identity." Ervin Stutzman, Eastern Mennonite Seminary dean and author of two books about his parents will speak to this theme.

Stutzman will be joined by Old Order Amish writer, Linda Byler, from south-central Pennsylvania. Byler is the author of seven children's books, two books of adult fiction, and a book of essays from her regular column in the Amish newspaper, "Die Botschaft." Hugely popular within the Amish community, Byler is gaining the notice of a wider public, and has just been offered a national book contract. Both Byler and Stutzman will speak about the pleasure and challenge of writing Amish family stories.

The evening will include special music by the men's Lancaster Harmony Quartet and a feast of traditional Lancaster County home cooking: fruit cup, salad, rolls, ham balls, home-made mashed potatoes, vegetable medley, and lemon sponge or cherry crumb pie. Tickets are $16.

Weavers is located on Route 272 at the intersection with Route 897 in Adamstown (2610 North Reading Road, Denver, if using mapquest), one mile north of the turnpike exit off Route 222 North (map available at www.weavermarkets.com/).

Confirm your tickets today via the entry blank at left or by phoning in your banquet registration to the Society at (717) 393-9745.
